Alexandria Gazette Forsale.

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 15.

AWKWARD SPEECHES .- We read in Lord Eldon's Journal :- "The most awkward thing that ever occurred to me was this:- Immedi ately after I was married I was appointed Deputy Professor of Law at Oxford, and the Law Professor sent me the first lecture, which I had to read immediately to the students, and which I began without knowing a single word that was in it. It was upon the statute applying to young men running away with maidens. Facey me reading with about one hundred and fifty boys and young men all giggling at the professor. Such a tittering audience no one ever had. The comical coincidence may have been an ac cidental one; but as the law professor must like the students, have known that his deputy ran away with his Bessie, the chances are against it. The great lawyer was fated to be reminded of the romantic episode of his life. A client whose daughter had been stolen from him, insisted upon the jury being told that a man who could run away with another man's daughter was a rascal and a villaic, and descred to be hanged. "I cannot say that," said Scott. "And why not, Lawyer Scott—why not?" in-quired the irate father. 'Because I did it my-self!" was the upanswerable reply.

After doing his office for a young couple, a elergyman was inveigled into proposing the health of the bride and bridegroom at the weding breaklast. He would up a neat little speech by expressing the hope that the result of the union of the happy pair might prove strictly analogous to that of the bride's honored parents. The groom looked angry, the bride went into hysteries, the bridesmaids blushed and became interested in the pattern of the carpet, the master of the house blew his nose with extraordinary violence, and the speaker set down wondering at the effect he had creat ed, till his better informed neighbor whispered that the lady was not the daughter of the host and hostess, but a niece who came to live with them when her mother and father were divorced.
